A long way to go

For the average American, health care is a phone call away. For the average Navajo, it's a twenty-mile walk.

Most Navajos have no running water . . no electricity. Telephones are out of the question.

Project HOPE has been invited to the 16-million acre reservation to train Navajos for careers in health professions. HOPE is trying to give the Navajo the same health advantages that other Americans enjoy.

Presently, there is only one Navajo physician in the world.

HOPE and the Navajo have a long way to go.
